WU'S GOOD ADVICE

"Have you observed any change of sentiment as taking place in the United States with regard to the Chinese Exclusion Act?"
Minister Wu answered with a rapid fire of remarks, mainly interrogations that did not wait for answers. The application of it all was less to the Mainland than to this Territory, and the Minister was proof against all efforts to divert his expression contrawise.
"Do you think it is right to treat the Chinese as they are treated here? Your people want the Chinese for labor, yet the law is enforced with utmost rigor to keep them out. Why do you not unite and have this sort of thing stopped?"
"This is not a political question. It is an economic question. This matter of labor affects your pockets. Why do you not rise above party and make a unanimous demand for what you want? I am told by these people that times are very bad here, that everything is down, down, lower than ever before. In affairs touching your pockets you should act for yourselves."
"Are you a slave?" Minister Wu asked with some emphasis. As he darted his forefinger out in punctuation of his sentences, while his mobile features worked with strenuous expression, he imparted to the listener a fascination such as a great actor would impart.
The interviewer, meekly suggested that the people of a Territory, under our form of government, had not power at Washington to obtain what they might wish or deem to be for their peculiar interest.
"You can do nothing unless you are united. If you agree on what this country needs you may have it. This is a democratic government, a government by and for the people, and the Government at Washington cannot refuse what your people unite in demanding."
"There may be good reason for excluding the Chinese from the Mainland—their admission might interfere with American labor—but there is no reason for applying the law to Hawaii. Here you need labor and your country is suffering because you exclude the Chinese."
"Do you think it is honorable, is it fair, is it equitable that the Chinese should be discriminated against? I am told that the Japanese may come and go here as they please. They are Asiatic the same as the Chinese, and why make a distinction?"
"The Japanese do you more harm here than the Chinese. I was driving about town this morning and I noticed that a majority of the small stores are kept by Japanese."
"Ah, the Chinese do not meddle with your politics. They are not looking after the voting franchise. Yes, the Chinese mind their own business, they are peaceable and sober. If they had votes in this country you would not dare to treat them as you do."

The "dare" was uttered with tremendous weight and riveted with that eloquent finger.
"You tell your editor, with my compliments, that it is all right to support the Republican party on national issues but he should work for united action in all matters affecting the welfare of your own little country."
Minister Wu was asked, in the first lull of his fervid discourse, regarding his entrance into the Imperial Cabinet on his return. Would his experience in Washington enable him to improve the relations between the Empire of China and the United States?
"I am a Minister still," he began to reply. "I have done all I could in Washington to promote commerce between the United States and China. But what can anybody do while America treats our countrymen so differently from other people. The United States ought to have an immense commerce with China, but can never expect it in full measure until she treats her with more fairness. Your people are great and noble, but they are too much controlled by politics. America has able statesmen who are above party in all great matters of state."
Wu Ting Fang was affable throughout, his interview being addressed most kindly as a medium of communication with the public. His parting salutation was most cordial.
Among those at the Consulate this morning, besides the Vice Consul now in charge, were: Poon Kwei Leung, secretary of Consulate; Chu Gem, Lau Tong, Lam Lop Shui, Ng Chan, Lee Chong, Chun Tong Chong, Man Chun Sang, Wong Fook, Yip Cheun Sang, Lau Kwong Yee, Chun Poo and Ng Monwar.

POPE'S LATE ENCYCLICAL.

Washington, Nov. 22.—The text of Pope Leo's latest encyclical to promote the study of the Scriptures has been received here. The encyclical declares that "in view of the complexity of modern studies and the manifold errors which prevail, it has become impossible for individual interpreters of the holy books to explain and defend them as the needs of the hour require," and it has "become necessary that their common studies should receive assistance and direction under the auspices and guidance of the Apostolic See." To this end, the encyclical says, the Pontiff has established a commission of serious men, "whose duty it will be to devote their entire energy to insure that the divine words may receive the explanation demanded of them by the times."
The members of the commission, the encyclical says, in regard to the uncompromising maintenance of the authority of the Scriptures, must exercise earnest care and diligence.
A belief in witchcraft still prevails in parts of Lancashire, also in the Isle of Man, and still more strongly in the Hebrides.

The forecast of the Senate Commission's report on Hawaiian affairs given in the Associated Press dispatches shows that the visiting Senators got at the pith of administrative difficulties in this Territory. Centralized power in the Hawaiian Islands is enjoying its last days and something approaching an American government is in sight.
The warlike attitude of Great Britain and Germany causes no particular surprise to those who have watched the chaotic conditions that have ruled in the Venezuelan nation for some months. The most recent dispatch indicates that the talk of a naval demonstration against Venezuela has served the purpose of bringing the Spaniards-Americans to their senses. A climax has been reached, however, which conveys to the public the probable meaning of the extensive American maneuvers in Southern waters under the direction of Admiral Dewey. The Monroe Doctrine will be enforced and Germany and England will find an American fleet in the close vicinity which will prevent radical action on the part of Europeans.
Appropos of the Senate Commission's prospective recommendation that Judge Kalua be removed, the leader of the Honolulu Knockers saws why an attack on Judge Gear was not made before the Commission. Why indeed? The opportunity offered for the knockers to say what they pleased, prefer charges or shoot their malicious shafts of innuendo, but never a yip was heard from the headquarters of the Honolulu Knockers. That section of the community even made strenuous efforts to deal decently with the Second Judge of the First Circuit during the Senate Committee's stay in the Islands. The fact of the matter is the Honolulu Knockers were too well aware of where they would land had they kept their campaign going while the Senators were here.

Marconi Claims He Has Spanned Atlantic
Glace Bay, Nova Scotia, Nov. 21.—Signor Marconi announced tonight that complete and satisfactory messages had been flashed across the Atlantic from his wireless station at Poldhu to the Italian cruiser Carlo Alberto in Sydney harbor. He said: "Full messages in the Morse code were transmitted from the Cornwall station to the Carlo Alberto, anchored in the harbor here. They thus work an important and distinct advance over the signaled letter 'S' which I received last year at St. John's, N. F. Several of these complete messages were received and I will announce the test of them within a few days."
No attempt, Marconi said, had been made to send messages across the ocean from the Table Head station, nor have any messages been received here. The plant is not yet completed and Marconi is waiting for the arrival of additional apparatus, from Montreal and Ottawa. He will then make an attempt at long-distance tests. Much of the apparatus has been already tested and the inventor said he was satisfied with it.
Asked if he intended to make the first announcement of the transmission of messages between Poldhu and Table Head to the Italian Government, Marconi said that the news would probably be known simultaneously on both sides of the Atlantic.
Marconi expects to leave Cape Breton for Boston in the Carlo Alberto some time before Christmas. While at Boston he will test the Cape Cod station. He may visit New York later and return to Cape Breton.
